The purpose of the present research was to test the proposed model designed to increase reliability. First, questions of reliability, validity, generalizability, and fit were addressed using three data sets that had been previously collected and analyzed. Issues regarding the test-retest reliability of the instrument, the construct validity of the instrument, and the extent to which it is capable of detecting real differences within and among groups, individuals, and conditions were examined. Results are discussed.

The company's chief executive is looking back and will focus industrial and manufacturing firms and continue to improve for personal services. With the company's focus on a single sector by looking forward will also have the sense of being in a better financial position than in previous times. Following a period of intense competition, the company has now moved to a new level of performance.
