

Chapter 16 - Patterns of Relationships (Page 61)

Mathematical Concepts: Data Sufficiency

Strategy 16 is used when you are presented with two statements, each of which is either a direct probability or a conditional statement. It is used when the two statements are either both true or both false. If you are given two statements, each of which is either a direct probability or a conditional statement, you can determine whether the two statements are both true or both false.
