Medea Criticism Paper

Helene P. Foley, the author of "Medea's Divided Self", addresses the two conflicting sides of Medea and what Euripides accomplished by making those warring traits "masculine" and "feminine". Many authors have touched on this topic before, but Foley focuses on the gender divide and what that looks like inside Medea herself rather than looking at Medea's two sides with relation to something other than gender. Foley specifically talks about how Medea "borrows heroic masculine standards to articulate her choice and stereotypically feminine duplicity and magic permit her to achieve her goals" (Foley 68). Men and women in that time had a deep cultural divide that is seen within Medea. Men were expected to work outside of the house while women were expected to stay home and tend to the children. These stereotypes are seen in each respective side of Medea. Although she does kill her children, Medea still has a maternal side. However, the only way for her to fully get revenge is to "[disown] her sons and the maternal commitment that blocks her autonomy" (Foley 68). The feminine side of Medea fights hard for her to not kill her sons, but ultimately the need for revenge (masculine trait) wins out. Medea is not only condemning Jason but also herself and must accept "the permanent suffering" (Foley 68).

Foley uses this essay to argue that the two sides of Medea show both genders at their worst and best. While the author makes it clear that men are the ones who hold all the power in society, she argues that the play makes criticizing comments on women as well as men. Foley
