Improving Collection of Indicators of Criminal Justice System Involvement in Population Health Data Programs National Academies of Sciences, Engineering, and Medicine, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on National Statistics, 2017-04-13 In the U S criminal justice system in 2014 an estimated 2.2 million people were in incarcerated or under correctional supervision on any given day and another 4.7 million were under community supervision such as probation or parole Among all U S adults 1 in 31 is involved with the criminal justice system many of them having had recurring encounters The ability to measure the effects of criminal justice involvement and incarceration on health and health disparities has been a challenge due largely to limited and inconsistent measures on criminal justice involvement and any data on incarceration in health data collections The presence of a myriad of confounding factors such as socioeconomic status and childhood disadvantage also makes it hard to isolate and identify a causal relationship between criminal justice involvement and health The Bureau of Justice Statistics collects periodic health data on the people who are incarcerated at any given time but few national level surveys have captured criminal justice system involvement for people previously involved in the system or those under community supervision nor have they collected systematic data on the effects that go beyond the incarcerated individuals themselves In March 2016 the National Academies of Sciences Engineering and Medicine held a workshop meant to assist the Office of the Assistant Secretary for Planning and Evaluation ASPE and Office of the Minority Health OMH in the U S Department of Health and Human Services in identifying measures of criminal justice involvement that will further their understanding of the socioeconomic determinants of health Participants investigated the feasibility of collecting criminal justice experience data with national household based health surveys This publication summarizes the presentations and discussions from the workshop Journal of the National Cancer Institute ,1990
