This report is a preliminary report on the results of the first phase of the investigation. It is intended to provide a general overview of the findings and to indicate the need for further research. The results are based on a limited number of cases and should not be taken as definitive. The investigation was conducted in accordance with the procedures set out in the research plan. The results are presented in the following sections: Introduction, Methods, Results, and Discussion. The results show that there is a significant correlation between the variables studied. This suggests that the hypothesis is supported. However, further research is needed to confirm these findings and to explore the underlying mechanisms. The results are discussed in the context of the existing literature and the implications for practice are considered. The conclusions are based on the findings of the study and the limitations of the study are acknowledged. The report is intended to provide a basis for further research and for the development of interventions.

Reviewers concluded that the authors had demonstrated that the study's outcomes could be attributed to the intervention. However, they also noted that the study had several limitations, including the lack of a control group and the potential for bias in the selection of participants.
