

I

The letter arrived on a Friday. Six and a half weeks, it seemed, as if those letters had been waiting for your reply—1967. It had caused confusion at the post office, the clerk scribbling the paper inside, studying it, passing it up to his supervisor, then the boss, but eventually it had been deemed business and sent out its way. No return address, only a New York postmark, six days old. On the outside, his name—and because of this he knows it is from his mother.

He has not been kind for a long time. His name, your name, after your father's letter, his mother told him once. But was it your own doing? The word that, when he read it, felt like him, something
