Important Warranty Information Regarding Television Format Viewing

See the warranty card for more information on warranty terms.

Wide screen format LCD Displays (16:9), the aspect ratio of the screen width to height, are primarily designed to view wide screen format full-motion video. The images displayed on them should primarily be in the wide screen 16:9 ratio format, or expanded to fill the screen. If your model offers this feature and the images are constantly moving. Displaying stationary graphics and images on screen, such as the dark videos on nonexpanded standard format television video and programming, should be limited to no more than 5% of the total television viewing per week. Additionally, viewing other stationary images and text such as stock market reports, video game displays, station logos, web sites or computer graphics and patterns, should be limited as described above for all televisions. Displaying stationary images that exceed the above guidelines can cause uneven aging of LCD Displays that, while subtle, but permanent burned-in ghost images in the LCD picture. To avoid this, vary the programming and images, and primarily display full screen moving images, not stationary patterns or dark bars. On LCD models that offer picture size features, use these controls to view different formats as a full screen picture. Be careful in the selection and duration of television formats used for viewing. Uneven LCD-aging as a result of format selection and use, as well as burned-in images, are not covered by your Samsung limited warranty.

Nilsson, William V. Lindberg, 2008 In psychology visual perception is the ability to interpret information from visible light reaching the eyes The resulting perception is also known as eyesight sight or vision The various physiological components involved in vision are referred to collectively as the visual system The visual system in humans allows individuals to assimilate information from the environment The act of seeing starts when the lens of the eye focuses an image of its surroundings onto a light sensitive membrane in the back of the eye called the retina The retina is actually part of the brain that is isolated to serve as a transducer for the conversion of patterns of light into neuronal signals The lens of the eye focuses light on the photoreceptive cells of the retina which detect the photons of light and respond by producing neural impulses These signals are processed in a hierarchical fashion by different parts of the brain from the retina to the lateral geniculate nucleus to the primary and secondary visual cortex of the brain The major problem in visual perception is that what people see is not simply a translation of retinal stimuli i e the image on the retina Thus people interested in perception have long struggled to explain what visual processing does to create what we actually see This book presents leading edge research from around the globe on this field How to Do Everything with Your TiVo Todd W.
