

Experiment 1: Venturi Flow

The Venturi tube is a device used to measure the flow rate of a fluid in a pipe. It consists of a pipe with a constriction in the middle. The fluid flows from the wider section to the narrower section, and the pressure drops in the narrower section.

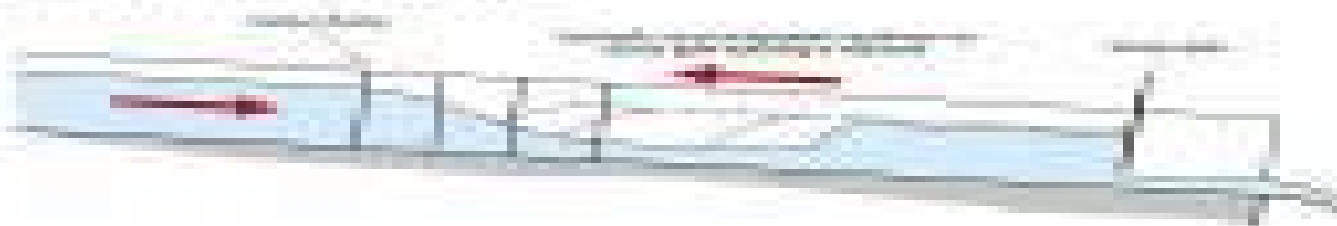

In the experiment, water flows through the Venturi tube, and the pressure is measured at two points: one in the wider section and one in the narrower section. The difference in pressure is used to calculate the flow rate.

It is important to note that the Venturi tube is only used for measuring flow rate in a pipe. It is not used for measuring flow rate in a tank or a reservoir.

For the purpose of this experiment, the Venturi tube is used to measure the flow rate of water in a pipe. The flow rate is measured by the difference in pressure between the two points.

Experimental Theory

Figure 1 shows the setup for the experiment. The water flows through the Venturi tube, and the pressure is measured at two points: one in the wider section and one in the narrower section. The difference in pressure is used to calculate the flow rate.
