Making Decisions About Liability And Insurance
 Colin F. Camerer, Howard Kunreuther, 2012-12-06 Two related trends have created novel challenges for managing risk in the United States The first trend is a series of dramatic changes in liability law as tort law has expanded to assign liability to defendants for reasons other than negligence The unpredictability of future costs induced by changes in tort law may be partly responsible for the second major trend known as the liability crisis the disappearance of liability protection in markets for particularly unpredictable risks This book examines decisions people make about insurance and liability An understanding of such decision making may help explain why the insurance crisis resulted from the new interpretations of tort law and what to do about it The articles cover three kinds of decisions consumer decisions to purchase insurance insurer decisions about coverage they offer and the decisions of the public about the liability rules they prefer which are reflected in legislation and regulation For each of these three kinds of decisions normative theories such as expected utility theory can be used as benchmarks against which actual decisions are judged The Canadian Journal of Economics, 2000 A general interest journal in economics The Faculty Directory of Higher Education, 1988 The Condom Industry in the United States James S. Murphy, 1990 The AIDS epidemic and the spread of other sexually transmitted diseases have drawn attention once again to the condom as a contraceptive and a protective agent against infection Experts are touting the age old condom as an important aspect of safe sex Controversial television commercials and billboards are advocated by worried governments The historical background and evolution of the industry the manufacturing process cost factors the distribution structure competition regulation consumer acceptance societal costs and profits are explained from an economic point of view AIM, 1981 Confirmatory and Exploratory Causal Measurement Models Regarding the Underlying Economic Dimensions Inherent in Annual Accounting Data David A.
