

Barriers to Trade

The harmonization of national export and import regulations, free trade in export markets of the goods of governments have to offer international trade opportunities for the benefit of their own economies. Once the free trade barriers have been either removed or reduced, multilateralism allows trading the world. Examples of these efforts include the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs, the World Trade Organization (WTO), the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), and the North Atlantic Trade Agreement (NAFTA) forum.

However, barriers to international trade exist, and national policies have been made that restrict export supply or restrict imports. In Figure 10, a free trade line represents the domestic supply and demand curves for a commodity that is produced domestically and imported. The domestic supply curve indicates domestic suppliers are willing and able to produce at other prices. If there were no international trade, the equilibrium price would be P_1 . If international trade is possible, P_2 would be produced only by domestic firms.

International Trade

If there is free international trade, the total supply for imports is the production for domestic suppliers (quantity Q_3) and the quantity imported ($Q_2 - Q_3$). There are three domestic levels of free trade: the free trade price, P_2 , domestic demand, Q_2 , and domestic supply, Q_3 . If there is free trade, the domestic price is P_2 , the domestic quantity demanded is Q_2 , and the domestic quantity supplied is Q_3 . If there is free trade, the domestic price is P_2 , the domestic quantity demanded is Q_2 , and the domestic quantity supplied is Q_3 . If there is free trade, the domestic price is P_2 , the domestic quantity demanded is Q_2 , and the domestic quantity supplied is Q_3 .
