Elizabeth Adams,2012 Truncated abstract The purpose of this study was to determine whether manual handling decisions made by nurses were associated with lost time manual handling injuries The specific aims were to investigate factors associated with manual handling decisions to investigate how nurses apply knowledge when making decisions to determine the ability of nurses to identify manual handling risks and problem solve them and to identify sub groups of nurses able to make appropriate informed decisions Two theoretical frameworks guided the study the Health Belief Model providing a psychosocial model to understand manual handling behaviour and the Haddon Matrix providing a credible framework to analyse injuries and identify prevention strategies Data were gathered in two phases from Registered and Enrolled Nurses in clinical positions at hospitals in Western Australia In Phase 1 data were analysed from five focus groups Phase 2 was designed as a case control study comprising 84 injured nurses cases and 268 randomly selected nurses controls from public and private hospitals Qualitative content analysis was used to code the focus group data within the framework of the Health Belief Model and informed the development of the questionnaire The Phase 2 questionnaire was used to gather data from cases and controls and a description of the injury incident from the cases Descriptive statistics and logistic regression were used for the analysis of data from the questionnaire As the same phenomenon was studied in both phases triangulation of these data was possible in order to generate a greater understanding of the phenomenon and improve the accuracy and interpretation of the data Phase 1 data demonstrated an inadequate perception of the health threat posed by manual handling and barriers to safe practice in the working environment nurses focused on completing their work and manual handling was not their priority A model was created to demonstrate why safe practice does not emerge from legislation policy and training and requires a supportive work environment adequate time and workload adequate staffing adequate workspace and appropriate accessible equipment Phase 2 data were analysed using logistic regression to create a model of factors associated with manual handling injury Nurses were more likely to incur a manual handling injury if they worked full time OR 1.82 95% CI 1.01 3.27 had no previous aches pain associated with manual handling OR 3.17 95% CI 1.58 6.37 and were less likely to perceive manual handling to be a health threat OR 0.50 95% CI 0.34 0.73 and OR 0.67 95% CI 0.51 0.89 After the injury cases were more likely than controls to rate their perception of susceptibility to manual handling injury higher OR 1.52 95% CI 1.34 1.72 and were more likely than controls to adopt safe practice OR 1.62 95% CI 1.03 2.55 Injury data showed the majority of injuries involved patients 74% with the majority of the patients having identifiable constraints reduced mobility increased weight altered mental state very sick or anxious In the work environment expectations had the greatest influence on injuries followed by staffing levels workload and workspace Manual Handling Workload and Musculoskeletal Discomfort in Nursing Personnel Nancy Nivison Menzel,2001 ABSTRACT Recommendations include instituting recorded patient assessments to standardize the type of equipment and the number of staff members needed for specific handling and movement activities as well as improved staff training Further research is needed on the following biomechanical forces on the wrist and knee during patient handling and movement tasks the effect of patient weight on the risk of patient handling and movement tasks and psychosocial stressors in addition to the physical workload of nursing staff
