

Barriers to Trade

The harmonization of national export and import regulations, free trade is a system wherein all the goods of governments are free to flow across international frontiers for the benefit of their own economies. Once the free trade system is in place, there have been various non-tariff trade barriers, which impede the flow of trade. Examples of these barriers include the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs, the World Trade Organization (WTO), the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), and the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) among others.

However, there are some countries that are not fully integrated into the world market. These countries might impose a variety of trade barriers, such as tariffs, to protect their domestic industries. These barriers can be in the form of quotas, which limit the quantity of goods that can be imported or exported. They can also be in the form of subsidies, which provide financial support to domestic industries. These barriers can be in the form of technical barriers, which are standards or regulations that must be met before goods can be imported or exported. These barriers can be in the form of sanitary and phytosanitary measures, which are measures to protect human, animal, or plant health. These barriers can be in the form of environmental measures, which are measures to protect the environment. These barriers can be in the form of cultural measures, which are measures to protect cultural heritage. These barriers can be in the form of other measures, which are measures to protect other interests.

International Trade

It shows a free international trade. The Demand curve represents the price that consumers are willing to pay for a good, and the Supply curve represents the price that producers are willing to accept for a good. The intersection of the two curves is at price  $P_1$  and quantity  $Q_1$ . When a country opens up to international trade, the price of the good rises to  $P_2$ . At this higher price, domestic producers are producing  $Q_2$  and foreign producers are producing  $Q_3 - Q_2$ . Thus, domestic producers are producing less and foreign producers are producing more. The area between  $P_1$  and  $P_2$  and between  $Q_1$  and  $Q_2$  is shaded blue and labeled 'Consumer Surplus'. The area between  $P_1$  and  $P_2$  and between  $Q_2$  and  $Q_3$  is shaded green and labeled 'Producer Surplus'. The area between  $P_2$  and  $P_1$  and between  $Q_1$  and  $Q_2$  is shaded red and labeled 'Deadweight Loss'.
