

ICE MAKER OPERATION

The Ice Making Process

Your ice machine is unique in how it forms ice with fractional freezing to form a slab of ice that is clear and has less dissolved solids than the water it is produced from. This is accomplished by running water over the cold evaporator plate which gradually freezes the water to produce the ice slab. Pure water freezes first, leaving the dissolved solids in the residual reservoir water to provide clear ice.

When the ice slab reaches the correct thickness, the ice sheet is released and slides onto the grid cutter. Here, the ice slab is cut into squares by the grid cutter's heated wires. The water containing the dissolved minerals is drained after each freezing cycle. Fresh water enters the machine for the next ice making cycle.
