

COST ACCOUNTING & CONTROL TEST BANK – Job Order Costing

I. Introduction

Job order costing presupposes the possibility of physically identifying the jobs being manufactured and charging each job with its own cost. The detailed records showing the costs of each job constitute a subsidiary ledger supporting the general ledger's work-in-process account.

Job order costing is useful and widely acceptable for businesses engaged in made-to-order work in factories, workshops, and repair shops, constructions or construction engineers, printing, aircraft manufacturing, and for service businesses such as legal, medical, architectural, accounting and consulting firms.

II. Definition

Job order costing method is the accumulation of costs by specific jobs (i.e., physical units, distinct batches, or job lots). This costing method is appropriate if a product can be produced separately, distinct from the other jobs which require different amount of materials, labor, and overhead.

III. When to Use Job Order Costing

This method is used when the products manufactured within the department or cost center are heterogeneous or dissimilar type of products.

IV. Procedures

A. Costing Each Product

1. Direct materials and direct labor are traced to a particular job.
2. Costs not directly traceable (i.e., manufacturing overhead) are applied to individual jobs using a predetermined overhead application rate (this is in accordance with Normal Costing of products.)
