1. Identify the problem. The first step in the problem-solving process is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the situation, gathering information, and determining the goal.

2. Analyze the problem. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to analyze it. This involves breaking the problem down into smaller, more manageable parts and identifying the causes of the problem.

3. Generate solutions. The third step is to generate potential solutions. This involves brainstorming ideas and considering different approaches to solving the problem.

4. Evaluate solutions. The fourth step is to evaluate the potential solutions. This involves comparing the solutions against the goal and identifying the most effective and feasible solution.

5. Implement the solution. The final step is to implement the chosen solution. This involves putting the solution into action and monitoring the results to ensure the problem is solved.

It is important to note that the results of this study are based on a cross-sectional design, which limits the ability to establish causality. Future research should employ longitudinal designs to investigate the temporal relationships between the variables studied. Additionally, the study was conducted in a specific cultural context, and the findings may not be generalizable to other populations. Further research is needed to explore the cultural and contextual factors that may influence the relationships observed in this study.

1. Identify the problem. The first step is to identify the problem. This involves understanding the symptoms and the context in which they are occurring.
