a practice until recent years In order to answer this question this book outlines a new approach for a socio cultural analysis of classical music asking how musical institutions practices and aesthetics are shaped by wider conditions of economic inequality and how music might enable and entrench such inequalities or work against them This approach is put into practice through a richly detailed ethnography which locates classical music within one of the cultures that produces it middle class English youth and foregrounds classical music as bodily practice of control and restraint Drawing on the author's own background as a classical musician this closely observed account examines youth orchestra and youth choir rehearsals as a space where young people learn the unspoken rules of this culture of weighty tradition and gendered control It highlights how the middle classes habitual roles boundary drawing around their protected spaces and reproducing their privilege through education can be traced within the everyday spaces of classical music These practices are camouflaged however by the ideology of autonomous art that classical music carries Rather than solely examining the social relations around the music the book demonstrates how this reproductive work is facilitated by its very aesthetic of controlled excitement getting it right precision and detail This book is of particular interest at the present moment thanks to the worldwide proliferation of El Sistema inspired programmes which teach classical music to children in underserved areas While such schemes demonstrate a resurgence in defending the value of classical music there has been a lack of debate over the ways in which its socio cultural heritage shapes its conventions today This book locates these contestations within contemporary debates on class gender and whiteness making visible what is at stake in such programmes
