Eye movement-related brain activity during perceptual and cognitive processing Andrey R. Nikolaev, Sebastian Pannasch, Junji Ito, Artem Belopolsky, 2014-09-23 The recording and analysis of electrical brain activity associated with eye movements has a history of several decades While the early attempts were primarily focused on uncovering the brain mechanisms of eye movements more recent approaches use eye movements as markers of the ongoing brain activity to investigate perceptual and cognitive processes This recent approach of segmenting brain activity based on eye movement behavior has several important advantages First the eye movement system is closely related to cognitive functions such as perception attention and memory This is not surprising since eye movements provide the easiest and the most accurate way to extract information from our visual environment and the eye movement system largely determines what information is selected for further processing The eye movement based segmentation offers a great way to study brain activity in relation to these processes Second on the methodological level eye movements constitute a natural marker to segment the ongoing brain activity This overcomes the problem of introducing artificial markers such as ones for stimulus presentation or response execution that are typical for a lab based research This opens possibilities to study brain activity during self paced perceptual and cognitive behavior under naturalistic conditions such as free exploration of scenes Third by relating eye movement behavior to the ongoing brain activity it is possible to see how perceptual and cognitive processes unfold in time being able to predict how brain activity eventually leads to behavior This research topic illustrates advantages of the combined recording and analysis of eye movements and neural signals such as EEG local field potentials and fMRI for investigation of the brain processes in humans and animals The contributions include research papers methodology papers and reviews demonstrating conceptual and methodological achievements in this rapidly developing field Flexible Bronchoscopy Ko-Pen Wang, Atul C. China, the Mainland of PRC, trades with other states in trillions of USD every year, and about 95% of the cargoes are carried by ocean-going ships calling at hundreds of Chinese ports each single day. Due to the enormous trade volume and shipping activities, foreign ships, companies, and professionals are often caught in the Chinese maritime law and court. The foreign parties involved in Chinese litigation or dispute resolution and their lawyers are more and more enthusiastic to study Chinese maritime cases in order to deal with their own cases properly or, if possible, predicate the potential risks and avoid the disputes outright. However, to date, no Chinese series casebook has ever been published. Now, for the first time, the authors offer this series casebook of delicately selected Chinese maritime judgments. Each year, the book selects a number of leading innovative and influential Chinese maritime judgments and presents full English translation of them together with summary to the readers so that they can have insights of how the Chinese maritime judges interpret, apply, and develop Chinese maritime law in practice. The book will benefit the worldwide students, academics, practitioners.
