Native Americans are indigenous people living in the Northern part of America within the boundaries of the current continental US, in Hawaii Island State, and in some parts of Alaska. Traditional healing systems are meant for balancing the body, spirit, and mind within the community context of the Native Americans. Contrary to the Western advance to health and healing, this group of people finds it odd to isolate one part of a human being and try by all means to heal that part, a holistic approach that has been practiced for a long time. Their survival depends on their wisdom of the connectedness and interrelatedness of everything in
