Air Force. Systems Command. Aeronautical Systems Division, 1961 Explorations in the Measurement and Prediction of Contributions of One Sample of Scientists Calvin Walker Taylor, 1961 Physical scientists at two Air Force research centers were intensively interviewed concerning the nature of scientific productivity and the characteristics of effective scientists Based on these interview suggestions data were collected on 52 criteria These were reduced analytically to 14 factor scores Following this several tests and questionnaires were developed for tryout as predictors Scores from these and previously developed instruments were correlated with the factor scores and three original criteria In the sample of 107 scientists criteria most related to tests and questionnaires in terms of number of significant correlations were ratings of likeliness as a member of a research team membership in professional societies organizational status rated work output supervisory ratings on overall performance and peer rankings on overall productivity The instruments that had scores correlating with the greatest number of criteria were a biographical data questionnaire self-ratings and a questionnaire designed to measure minimum level of aspiration. The outcomes of this investigation were identification of a wide variety of measurable criteria and a number of self-report instruments suitable for future longitudinal follow-up and validation as a means of identifying kinds of scientific talent needed by the Air Force.
