Curricula, Examinations, and Assessment in Secondary Education in Sub-Saharan Africa World Bank,2008-02-15 Economic and social changes fast evolution of technology and the growing importance of Internet services and international communications all these require secondary education providers to adapt what is taught and learned in schools However in Africa the content of secondary curricula is in most cases ill adapted to 21st century challenges where young people are mobile have access to more and instant information and face health threats such as HIV AIDS In addition implementation problems exist and the time for instruction is often much less than what is required by the prescribed secondary curriculum. In Africa there is a need to develop a secondary education curriculum adapted to the local economic and social environment but with international comparable performance indicators. This study analyzes that challenge the quality of curricula and assessment and their development processes in secondary education in Africa against the background of existing contexts, conditions and ambitions on the one hand and current pedagogical thinking on the other. This World Bank Working Paper was prepared as part of the Secondary Education and Training in Africa SEIA initiative which aims to assist countries to develop sustainable strategies for expansion and quality improvements in secondary education and training.

Social rights are a pivotal concern for all of society including today's population of children. The study of the rights or lack thereof that children have must be undertaken to ensure that future generations are thriving members of their communities. Global Ideologies Surrounding Children's Rights and Social Justice highlights the trials and tribulations that children have often had to overcome to be considered true citizens of their communities. Featuring comprehensive coverage on a wide range of applicable topics such as child abuse, socio-economic rights, social injustice, and welfare issues, this is a critical reference source for educators, academicians, students, and researchers interested in studying new approaches for the social advancement of children. Information and Communication Technologies for Women's Socioeconomic Empowerment, Samia Melhem, Claudia Morrell, Nidhi Tandon, 2009-10-02. This paper reviews how women in the developing world access and use information and communication technology (ICT). It examines the discourse and controversies surrounding the digital gender divide, including links to poverty and illiteracy. Major themes concerning women and ICTs are explored, such as women in the ICT workforce, how girls and women relate differently to ICT, and opportunities and barriers for women in science and technology in general. Current research relating to gender and ICT is often country-specific and is more prevalent in developed countries than in developing countries. This paper suggests where additional research is needed on barriers to women's entry and access to ICT. The overall objective of this paper is to influence policy dialogue around women and ICT for development by raising awareness of the digital gender divide. Economic opportunity for women in ICT will not be realized until policies address gender considerations and ensure that ICT investment contributes to more sustainable and equitable development. American Journal of Public Health, 2002.
