Turbocharger, description

The turbocharger is driven by the exhaust gases as they pass through the turbine housing.

The exhaust gas flow causes the turbine rotor in the turbine housing to rotate. The compressor rotor is positioned on the same shaft as the turbine rotor. The compressor rotor is positioned in a housing which is connected between the air cleaner and the engine induction manifold.

When the compressor rotor rotates, air is drawn from the air cleaner. The air is compressed and forced into the engine cylinders, after it first has been cooled down while passing through the intercooler.
