the same time, the authors also acknowledge the limitations of their study. As they note, the study was limited to a single site and a single time point. They also note that the study did not include a control group, which could have helped to control for other factors that might have influenced the results. Finally, they note that the study did not include a long-term follow-up, which could have helped to assess the long-term effects of the intervention.

Although the authors give no quantitative estimates of the number of people who have been killed, they do state that the number of people who have been killed is "in the thousands" (p. 107). They also state that the number of people who have been killed is "in the thousands" (p. 107).
