

Back to My Mac User's Guide

This guide will show you how to access a remote Leopard-based Mac, Time Capsule, or external hard disk connected to an AirPort Extreme Base Station over the Internet using MobileMe.

Overview

Retrieving a file from your Mac when you're away from home may seem like a daunting task. In fact, it may seem nearly impossible considering that your home Internet provider frequently changes your computer's Internet address—and your router or wireless base station disguises things further. But with Mac OS X Leopard and a MobileMe subscription, it's not only possible, it's simple.

Back to My Mac uses Bonjour networking technology to keep an updated record of your computer's addresses on a MobileMe server. So when you're on the road, you'll see your other computers in the Shared section of the Finder sidebar, just as if you were at home. You can even access the files stored on your Time Capsule or a hard disk connected to an AirPort Extreme with 802.11n.

Safe and secure

To make connecting to your Mac over the Internet secure, Back to My Mac uses advanced authentication and data encryption technologies to help prevent unauthorized access to your data and protect it during transit. For more information, see the Security section at the end of this guide.
