

CYCLE WORLD TEST HONDA SHADOW 700

A CASE OF PREVENTIVE MEDICINE

Most any motorcyclist can't call a Honda Shadow 700 preventive medicine. Not when the 1990 Shadow 700 was unveiled as a commercially minded and vibrant model, Honda offered only one reason for all of the bike's changes: prevention. The '90 Shadow had been one of the most successful models in recent years, and Honda simply wanted to ensure that what was healthy stayed healthy.

And there was no question about the previous Shadow's extreme good health, as far as its domestic performance was concerned, at least. From its very introduction as 1983's 750, the particular light-blue-and-white 'V-Twin' not only became Honda's best-selling model, but America's best-selling motorcycle of any kind, period. Until last year, did it get displayed at the top of the sales charts by another model, Honda's own silver-suspension Rebel 250?

But, it wasn't the Rebel that sparked the rebelling of the Shadow. It was a combination of the Honda Rebel and the Yamaha Virago. Parked next to either of these two, a 1989-1990 Shadow of 1983-1985 vintage looked positively lackluster. When the Shadow showed off its sporting character and highly polished chromes, the Shadow had only plastic and blacked paint. When the Yamaha had a full tank and a multi-looking engine, the Shadow seemed like budget and flimsy.

So as a cosmetic makeover, Honda has given the '90 Shadow a new look. Not instead of going after the look, light and midsize look of the Rebel, Honda went to even more, making the Shadow to what is called the "big, long and low" image. And the bike is long, with an 8.1-inch wheelbase. It can measure paragon any other motorcycle made. And with a seat just 17 inches off the ground, the Shadow is low, as well.

That basic profile is nothing new.
