Abstract: This study examined the effects of a 12-week, 100% bodyweight resistance training program on the body composition and muscle strength of sedentary, middle-aged men. The program was designed to be a full-body workout, performed three times per week, with exercises targeting all major muscle groups. The results showed that the program led to significant improvements in muscle mass, strength, and body composition. Specifically, participants experienced a significant increase in muscle mass, a decrease in body fat percentage, and an increase in muscle strength. These findings suggest that a 12-week, 100% bodyweight resistance training program can be an effective intervention for improving body composition and muscle strength in sedentary, middle-aged men.
