Macroeconomics Samuelson Nordhaus 19th Edition:

Economics Paul A. Samuelson, William D. Nordhaus, 2009-04-08 Samuelson's text was first published in 1948 and it immediately became the authority for the principles of economics courses. The book continues to be the standard bearer for principles courses and this revision continues to be a clear, accurate and interesting introduction to modern economics principles. Bill Nordhaus is now the primary author of this text and he has revised the book to be as current and relevant as ever.

The Economics of Globally Shared and Public Goods S. Niggol Seo, 2020-07-02 The Economics of Globally Shared and Public Goods responds to an urgent need to consolidate and refine the economic theories and explanations pertinent to globally shared resources. Making a clear distinction between theories and empirical models, it elucidates the problem of global public goods while incorporating insights from behavioral economics. Its comprehensive and technical review of existing theoretical models and their empirical results illuminate those models in practical applications. Relevant for economists and others working on challenges of globally shared goods such as climate change and global catastrophes, The Economics of Globally Shared and Public Goods provides a path toward greater co-operation and shared successes. Offers an encompassing description of the economics of global public goods. Provides an ensemble of empirical analyses of behavioral complexities. Defines a set of optimality conditions for a solution applicable to many problems.

The Clash of Economic Ideas Lawrence H. White, 2012-04-16 This book places economic debates in their historical context and outlines how economic ideas have influenced swings in policy.

Introducing Anthropological Economics Sujay Rao Mandavilli, This paper attempts to merge the concepts and theoretical frameworks of the disciplines of Anthropology and Economics and attempts to create a new sub-field in Economics called Anthropological Economics which is mired in Anthropological concepts and principles and seeks to maximize not only human welfare and happiness but also wealth maximization across cultures while considering both the psychic unity of man, universal human needs and culture-specific factors. Thus Anthropological Economics is expected to be inter-related to other disciplines of Economics but remain complementary to them, i.e. it is not expected that it will intrude into other sub-fields of economics, replace them or override their principles in any way. It will therefore draw upon other aspects of economic theory and enrich them suitably. It is therefore expected that all aspects of Economic theory will be taken into consideration for policy formulation and decision making, including those of Anthropological economics and independent context-specific judgment will always be applied. The new proposed field of Anthropological Economics proposes to take the idea of Human Welfare to its logical conclusion by extending the work already carried out in various sub-disciplines of economics and integrating it more tightly with various concepts in Anthropology. Many new tools and techniques are therefore proposed as a part of this paper and we believe these will suitably enrich the field of Economics as well. While many attempts have been made in the past to integrate the fields of Anthropology and Economics, we hope this endeavour will take this exercise to a much higher level by creating a new generation of Anthroeconomists We also hope it will eventually help move mainstream economics away from Neo classical approaches to Anthropological and human centric approaches Why we need a revolution in the Social sciences: A post-colonial perspective Sujay Rao Mandavilli,2024-05-11 We began our work in right and in serious earnest in the year 2005 November 14th 2005 to be precise when children s day is celebrated all over India in commemoration of the birthday of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru the first Prime Minister of India The underlying philosophy of our work however stretches back to the early 1990 s even the mid 1980 s when we faced a great deal of cognitive dissonance in many of our endeavours and daily walks of life due to a constant exposure to and a bombardment by a large number of philosophies and ideas from different sources both human and non human In the year 2005 particularly after the aforesaid date we had reached out to several leading lights and luminaries in the fields of science religion philosophy and spirituality with a great deal of hope to meaningfully engage with them and elicit their own pet theories proposals and viewpoints on various issues and topics We had hoped that this would also help us in our own voyage and journey of discovery The results were indeed startling there was a wide variation in viewpoints based on the scholar in question s own religious linguistic and nationalistic affiliation and loyalties Therefore the age of ideology has still not formally or conceptually ended ending this can change many fundamental equations at a grassroots level and can make life better for all of us living in different parts of the world As a matter of fact Eurocentric biases in various fields of the social sciences has only served to throw up counter reactions and exacerbate ideological differences Intellectualism is also still weak in general particularly in developing countries particularly owing to the following factors Climate Economics Michael Roos,Franziska M. Hoffart,2020-11-13 This book is a philosophical critique of the economics of climate change from both an ethical and philosophy of economics perspective Mitigating climate change is not so much a scientific problem but rather a political social and above all an economic problem A future without greenhouse gas emissions requires a radical transformation towards a sustainable low carbon economy and society How this transformation could be achieved raises numerous economic questions Many of these questions remain untouched although economists are equipped with a suitable toolkit and expertise This book argues that economists have a social responsibility to carry out more research on how global warming could be stopped and that ultimately economic analysis of climate change must be a political economic approach that treats the economy as part of a wider social system This approach will be of interest to policy makers educators students and researchers in support of more pluralism in economic research and teaching

Plotting the contours for India's economic development: Why this could be a role model for other developing nations as well Sujay Rao Mandavilli,2024-05-05 In a paper published by us a couple of years ago on Anthropological Economics the year 2020 to be precise we had mooted the idea of trickle up economics as contrasted with the rather more popular and mundane trickle down economics We had argued that the latter would be somewhat dubious iffy inconsistent and non replicable in a wide variety of situations particularly in the case of developing nations We had argued that trickle up economics would actually boost wide ranging economic growth and add to the Gross domestic product in a big way While we never were and still are not big fans of socialism we have always argued and will continue to argue for balanced diversified and equitable economic development models There is a world of difference between the two We had also argued that the economic models pursued by advanced industrial nations will not by and large work in developing nations Thus American style economic conservatism is meaningless in Indian political and economic contexts There are fundamental differences in ground realities between these two different sets of nations It would make eminent sense for the readers of this book to read the aforesaid paper as well as we will not be able to reproduce the contents in this paper in its entirety here many of the proposals advocated and espoused in this paper can also be implemented by developing economies though rather much more slowly We focus only on the meat here Microeconomics Paul Anthony Samuelson,William D.
