

DEMONS OF DECAY

Demons represent the dark, chaotic impulses of humanity made manifest. Different demons represent different aspects of this darkness, but none are as revolting as the demons of decay. These demons are born from the tendency of mortals to neglect themselves and the world they live in, thus allowing disease and entropy to run their course unopposed. In some worlds, these fiends operate independently to spread plagues and decay. On others, they act in service to a mighty demon lord or demonic god who presides over the domain of rot and disease.

Unnatural Vitality. Demons of decay are easily recognized by their bloated, rotting, disease-ridden forms. The decaying nature of their bodies does not mean these fiends are fragile or easy to slay. Demons of decay can shrug off incredible amounts of punishment relative to their size while their would-be slayers slowly succumb to terrible afflictions. Many who worship these demons do so in hopes of gaining this unnatural vitality, even if it means subjecting themselves to horrific rot and disease.

Cheerful Nihilists. Demons of decay represent the inevitable deterioration of all things. Those who have succumbed to nihilism and apathy are especially vulnerable to their influence. Yet, these demons and their followers are almost always jolly and cheerful. They revel in the pointlessness of life and celebrate the perpetual state of rot to which existence is subject. Those who worship these fiends often seek a means of escaping despair and fear of death, and by accepting the gifts of rot and disease, these worshippers cheerfully shed all their worries and woes.

THE DAZED CONDITION

Several of the abilities of these demons inflict the "Dazed" condition. At the time of this writing, this is a condition defined in the playtest material for D&D One. You can use the effects of that condition, or the following effect:

A dazed creature can't take reactions and on its turn, it must choose whether it gets a move, an action, or a bonus action; it gets only one of the three.

Promoters of Life. The dark irony of these fiends is their genuine love of life. They hold a motherly love for all living things, including diseases and parasites, which they fail to see as any less important than other lifeforms. These fiends cast no judgments on the intrinsic worth of any lifeform and hold a deadly parasite in just as much esteem as a humanoid whom they believe should provide a home for as many parasites as possible.

They spread diseases not out of malice but out of a desire to see life thrive, even if it is in the form of a plague. Those who resist diseases, or worse, cure them, are seen as cruel destroyers of life by these fiends and their followers. Death and decay are inevitable, and the best one can do is provide a loving home for as many other forms of life as possible while letting go of the need to hold onto what can't be maintained.
