Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, 3-day-per-week, 100-min-per-session, low-impact aerobically demanding dance program on the health-related fitness of 10-year-old girls. The program was designed to be fun and enjoyable, and to include a variety of dance styles. The program was evaluated using a pretest and posttest design. The girls' health-related fitness was measured at the beginning and end of the program using a series of standardized tests. The results of the study showed that the girls' health-related fitness improved significantly after the 12-week program. The girls' cardiovascular fitness, muscular strength, and flexibility all improved significantly. The girls' body composition also improved, with a significant decrease in body fat percentage. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week, 3-day-per-week, 100-min-per-session, low-impact aerobically demanding dance program can be an effective way to improve the health-related fitness of 10-year-old girls.
