Shao, Zhen-Ni Guo, John Zhang, Weilin Xu, 2022-03-09 Neurodegeneration: From Genetics to Molecules Victoria Campos-Peña, Marco Antonio Meraz-Ríos, Rosalinda Guevara-Guzmán, Karla Guadalupe Carvajal, 2016-11-15 Chronic degenerative diseases are one of the major public health problems particularly those affecting the nervous system They are characterized by the degeneration of specific cell populations that include several pathologies which contribute significantly to morbidity and mortality in the elderly population Therefore in recent years the study of neuroscience has gained significant importance Most of these neurodegenerative disorders are the result of a complex interaction between genetic and environmental factors that generate progression and can even determine its severity The presence of mutations in genes such as LRRK2 SNCA PARK7 PARK2 or PINK1 is associated with Parkinson's disease Mutations in genes such as APP PS1 and PS2 are associated with familial Alzheimer's disease while HTT gene mutations are the cause of Huntington's disease In most cases this condition is inherited in an autosomal dominant pattern which means one copy of the altered gene in each cell is sufficient to cause the disorder It is known that these mutations can also alter the proteins function however it has not yet been possible to fully understand how some genetic changes cause the disease or influence the risk of developing these disorders. Most symptoms seen in these conditions occur when specific nerve cells are damaged or die, generating a loss in brain communication. Also, many of these mutations generate aggregation of intracellular or extracellular proteins affecting cell function and eventually causing neuronal death. It is unclear whether the presence of these aggregates plays an important role in nerve cell death during the development of neurodegenerative diseases or if they are simply part of the response of cells to the disease. Other mutations affect the mitochondrial function, generating alterations in energy production and promoting the formation of unstable molecules such as free radicals. Under normal conditions, the harmful effects caused by free radicals are offset within the cell. However, in pathological conditions, the presence of mutations can alter this process by allowing the accumulation of radicals and damaging or killing cells. On the other hand, we also know that these diseases may not have a direct genetic component; thus, the study of sporadic type neurodegenerative diseases is much more complex. Histopathological lesions as well as the cellular and molecular alterations are generally indistinguishable from familial cases. For this reason, it is important to understand the genetic and molecular mechanisms associated with this type of pathologies. In this sense, this issue aims to understand the molecular processes that occur in the brain and how these are influenced by the environment, genetics, and behavior.

European Agreement Concerning the International Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Inland Waterways (Adn) United Nations Publications, 2015. The ADN, done at Geneva on 26 May 2000 under the auspices of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe (UNECE) and the Central Commission for Navigation on the Rhine (CCNR), has been in force since February 2008. This version has been prepared on the basis of amendments applicable as from 1 January 2015. The Regulations annexed to the ADN contain provisions concerning dangerous substances and articles, their carriage in packages and in bulk on board inland navigation vessels or tank vessels, as well as provisions concerning the construction and operation of such vessels. They also address requirements and procedures for inspections, the issue of certificates of approval, recognition of classification societies, monitoring and training, and examination of experts. They are harmonized to the greatest possible extent with the dangerous goods agreements for other modes of transport.
