

The Department of Transportation's Office of Transportation Policy and Planning is currently conducting a study to determine the impact of the proposed changes to the Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standards on the automotive industry. The study is being conducted in cooperation with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) and the American Automobile Manufacturers Association (AAMA). The study will focus on the impact of the proposed changes on the automotive industry's ability to meet the standards and on the cost of compliance. The study will also examine the impact of the proposed changes on the safety of the vehicles. The study is expected to be completed by the end of the year.
