Recombination during meiosis

Recombination is the exchange of DNA segments between non-sister chromatids of a pair of homologous chromosomes. This process occurs during Prophase I of Meiosis I. The exchange of DNA segments between non-sister chromatids of a pair of homologous chromosomes is called recombination. Recombination results in the formation of new genetic combinations that were not present in the parent cells. This process is illustrated in Figure 3. Recombination is an important process for creating genetic diversity.
