The Bounds of Freedom: Kant's Causal Theory of Action Robert Greenberg, 2016-09-26 This monograph is a new interpretation of Kant's temporal conception of the causality of the freedom of the will The interpretation is based on an analysis of Kant's primary conception of an action viz as a causal consequence of the will The analysis in turn is based on H P Grice's causal theory of perception and on P F Strawson's modification of the theory The monograph rejects the customary assumption that Kant's maxim of an action is a causal determination of the action It assumes instead that the maxim is definitive of the action and since its main thesis is that an action for Kant is to be primarily understood as an effect of the will it concludes that the maxim of an action can only be its logical determination Kant's temporal conception of the causality of free will is confronted not only by contemporary philosophical conceptions of causality but by Kant's own complementary theory of causality in the Second Analogy of Experience According to this latter conception causality is a natural relation among physical and psychological objects and is therefore a temporal relation among them Faced with this conflict Kant scholars like Allen W Wood either reject Kant's temporal conception of causality or like Henry E Allison accept it but only in an anodyne form Both camps however make the aforementioned assumption that Kant's maxim of an action is a causal determination of the action The monograph rejecting the assumption belongs to neither camp
