The Language Demands of School Alison L. Bailey, 2007-01-01 The Language Demands of School is an edited volume describing an extensive empirical base for academic English testing instruction and professional development. The chapters comprise empirical research by Bailey and colleagues at the National Center for Research on Evaluation Standards Student Testing CRESST at UCLA and invited contributions by practitioners in the fields of language policy testing and instruction. The central focus of the chapters is the research conducted by CRESST over the last two years in an attempt to document the academic English language demands placed on school age learners of English. The three additional chapters give the perspectives of a policy maker at the state level, test developers and practitioners. The Language Demands of School fills a gap in the current literature by addressing the kinds of English required of K-12 English Learner students from an evidence-based perspective. This is timely given the broader context of the No Child Left Behind Act of 2001, which has prompted school systems to identify English language proficiency tests to meet the federal mandate. One of the problems that has surfaced in the search for English language tests for K-12 English Learner students is the inadequacy of existing research on the development of the academic English language skills that all students, both English Learner and native English speaking, need to be successful in the school setting. The Language Demands of School is devoted to exploring this topic and to presenting research that illuminates both the questions and the answers. Making Meaning by Making Connections Kathy L. Schuh, 2016-10-20

This book documents those first links that students make between content they learn in their classrooms and their prior experiences. Through six late elementary school case studies, these knowledge construction links are brought to life. The links of the students are often rich in describing who these individuals are, where they are in their learning process, and what is meaningful to them. Many times these links point to what has been learned both in and out of school and the contexts when and where that learning took place. The mind as rhizome metaphor was used to guide the development and interpretation of the studies, while the lens of Peircian semiotics provides an interpretation for these initial links. The resulting grounded theory is presented through a rich and extensive presentation of excerpts from classroom observations, student interviews, and a student writing activity, and describes the varying types of student links, how the links were prompted, the relationships between what the students were learning and what they already knew, and specific types of in-school links. The narrative includes how these links were supported or inhibited in the classroom, drawing on the roles of the teachers in the classrooms and what constituted authority sources of information in those classrooms. Before exploring the students' linking as a process of ongoing semiosis and how this process is part of a dynamic system, a study of the relationship between student knowledge links and achievement is shared. This rich narrative will be of interest to scholars and practitioners alike and includes an extensive appendix documenting the research methods. Iowa Tests of Basic Skills
