On the 29th of May 2014, the opinion piece 'Campus killer a hero of women haters' appeared in The Australian. In this article, the author argues in an informed and passionate tone that online misogynistic hate groups were the main cause of the Santa Barbara shootings. Towards the end of the article, there is a shift of tone and the article becomes more informative than opinionated.

From the beginning of the article, the author uses attacks to assert their position of authority and position the audience to agree with their contention. The title of the article, "Campus killer a hero of women haters" immediately appeals to the reader's sense of social justice and sets the tone of the article. The author attempts to persuade the reader throughout the article that the "culture of male entitlement" resulted in the Santa Barbara shootings. The author suggests that misogyny on the internet fuelled Elliot Rogers in his attack and persuades the audience accept their view as well as take it on as their own. This is done through the use of loaded language, which suggests to the reader that the author's opinion is the correct one. The author refers with authority to the Men's Rights Movement as "a nebulous group of male supremacists." The negative connotation associated with these words encourages the audience to accept the implication that these groups are entitled and do not have any clear idea of what they aim to do.

The author's use of loaded language is evident in the title, 'Campus killer a hero of women haters'. The word 'killer' is a strong, negative word that immediately sets a tone of violence and aggression. The word 'hero' is a positive word that suggests a person who is admired and respected. The combination of these two words creates a strong contrast that suggests that the author is taking a strong stance on the issue. The author's use of the word 'women haters' is also loaded, as it suggests a person who is hostile and prejudiced against women. The author's use of these words is a clear attempt to persuade the reader that the author's opinion is the correct one.

Oracy in English Language Education Julia Reckermann, Philipp Siepmann, Frauke Matz, 2024-06-07 This book innovatively connects the two fields of oracy and practice oriented empirical research in English language education. It creates synergies and proposes innovative approaches to the study of oracy in the context of learning and teaching English as a second additional or foreign language. The book also develops a contemporary and holistic concept of oracy thus contributing to the theoretical discourse in this area of research. The first part provides a general framework of different approaches to conducting practice oriented research in English language teaching. It introduces the concept of oracy and discusses its relevance to language teaching. Design based research and action research are outlined as two practice oriented research approaches. The second part presents research on how oracy can be fostered and assessed at primary and secondary levels while the third part focuses on tertiary education. The contributions to this book highlight the opportunities and challenges of conducting research in on and for classroom practice with stakeholders such as teachers, students, teacher trainees, university students, parents and school administrators. They explore selected teaching methods, assessment and finally teacher education. The theoretical, methodological and practical challenges of research practice partnerships are also addressed. This book demonstrates that innovative approaches to the development and assessment of oral skills can be developed through close collaboration between different stakeholders in language education. It serves as an inspiration for other educators and researchers in the field of English language education at all levels. Resources in Education, 1982

Communication and Language Analysis in the Corporate World Hart, Roderick P., 2014-01-31 While personal variables like age, education and gender are often thought to contribute to a person's distinctive speech pattern, corporate environments often develop their own way of communication which include larger scale variables like the economy and organizational traditions. Communication and Language Analysis in the Corporate World provides insight into the verbiage of the corporate world and the influence of this environment for a person's speech pattern, language and terminology. This book will provide a guide for language researchers and business leaders alike so that they may find a way to communicate with everyone, customers, colleagues and CEOs effectively. Language Acquisition in CLIL and Non-CLIL Settings Verena Möller, 2017-12-15 Language Acquisition in CLIL and Non-CLIL Settings builds a bridge between Second Language Acquisition and Learner Corpus Research. LCR methodologies to take the evaluation of Content and Language Integrated Learning (CLIL) to a new level. The study innovates in two main ways. First, it is based on a highly diversified L2 database which includes learner corpus data as well as experimental data from the same learners. These linguistic components of the database are complemented with extensive information on learner variables including cognitive and affective factors which are rarely studied in LCR. Second, the study relies on multifactorial statistical analyses to assess the effectiveness of CLIL itself as well as the impact of the selectivity inherent in the CLIL system which has frequently been ignored. The linguistic focus of the study is the English passive which is investigated in CLIL and non CLIL teaching materials and subsequently related to learner output      Language and Language Behavior Abstracts ,1982      Language Reader [first to Sixth Year] Franklin Thomas Baker,George Rice Carpenter,Katherine Bowditch Owens,Mary Elizabeth Brooks,Ida Elizabeth Robbins,Jennie Freeborn Owens,1910      Linguistics and Language Behavior Abstracts ,2006-04      The Fourth Estate ,1922      Lawyers Reports Annotated ,1918      The Newspaper and the Historian Lucy Maynard Salmon,1923
