STICKY ISN'T SO ICKY

Children involved: Amalia	Education: Liana	Date: 10/2/14
This morning Amalia brought a flower and some leaves into our Caterpillar Room. Amalia's Dad told me that she had picked the flower and leaves from their front garden. Amalia had a big grin on her face as she stretched her arms out, showing me the flower. "Whee! That's a beautiful flower!" I said excitedly. Amalia said "Yup dad" and took my hand and led me to the art area. (She sat herself on a chair at one of the tables and began to put the leaves off the flower. I asked Amalia "Should we make some art with your flower and leaves?" and Amalia responded by nodding her head. I encouraged Amalia to continue pulling apart her flower as I created a frame of context which I then placed in front of her. She looked at me and then at the context and then at me again. I told her "It's okay, have a play, what does it feel like?" Amalia put her finger into the context and then pulled it away- it got stuck, so she pulled a little harder and her finger was free and she smiled. She took a few petals and a leaf and sprinkled them over the context, which she then pulled down with her hand. She placed some more of her petals and leaves onto the context and as she was pressing them down, her fingers got stuck to the context. Amalia began to laugh and shriek and was banging her hands on the context. Amalia picked up her frame and looked through it from underneath, touching the objects that she had stuck down. She put it back down and took off the natural materials that she had stuck down. I asked her "Would you like to go and get some more flowers and leaves from our garden?" (She replied "no" and left the table to go and play with the dolls in the dramatic play area.
 IDENTITY Amalia appears to be feeling safe, secure and supported in her learning environment as she confidently separated her leaf (and collected petals) into one of her illustrations.	 COMMUNITY This suggests that Amalia is growing an appreciation for natural environments.	 SELF LEARNING It is evident that Amalia is building confidence in her skills and emotional wellbeing as she made this drawing from beginning to end.	 EXPLORING Amalia used her fingers to separate and stick the objects. This suggests that she is developing a range of fine motor and gross motor.	 COMMUNICATION Amalia seems to be using mostly non-verbal communication to communicate her feelings, thoughts and suggestions.

What's next? <ul style="list-style-type: none"> To further encourage positive separations in the morning and her interest in nature, I requested that Amalia bring in other natural resources to incorporate into her play for the rest of the week. Tomorrow, we will also collect some more natural materials from our outdoor learning environment to use tomorrow.
