different levels of government Overall the book argues for greater harmonization and comparability while allowing room for diversity and experimentation John Wanna Griffith University Australia This book presents a comprehensive analysis of public expenditure control in Europe and the coordination strategies available It provides a detailed scrutiny of the various audit systems in the EU and the difficulties in building consistency or harmony between them The book demonstrates how successful strategies should aim to strengthen the collaboration between different layers of government at the EU national and regional levels The authors illustrate how effective cooperation between Supreme Audit Institutions SAIs is one of the starting points for any rational system of external control of Europe s public finances However this cooperation must be founded upon respect for the independence and operating mandate of each SAI and for their different organizational and operational procedures Importantly the authors analyse three critical phenomena that determine the present context in which SAIs develop their activities These include the impact of the current processes of supranational integration and state decentralization taking place in Europe the growing demand for transparency accountability and external control and the more complex situations created by the loss of a clear distinction between the private and public sectors The book also offers detailed country studies of audit functions and how they are developed and interpreted and examines coordination strategies in the context of fraud auditing reporting and harmonization This volume will prove to be an invaluable resource for scholars students and practitioners of public finance auditing and administration It will also be of interest to those working in the areas of public budgeting and public sector management in the EU
