For the purposes of the present study, we are using a very basic model of the brain, treating the brain as a homogeneous medium that contains a large number of neurons and axons. In this model, the brain is represented by a rectangular block of material with a uniform distribution of neurons and axons. The model is based on the assumption that the brain is a homogeneous medium, and that the distribution of neurons and axons is uniform throughout the brain. This model is used to study the effects of various factors on the brain, such as the effects of aging, disease, and injury. The model is also used to study the effects of various treatments on the brain, such as the effects of drugs, surgery, and physical therapy.
