Introduction

There are four market types namely; monopoly, monopolistic competition, pure competition and oligopolistic markets (Peterson 1977). Pure monopolies and pure competition firms represent the two extremes of competition which is not easy to find in practice. The following is a review of an example of an organisation in Maryland operating in a pure competition market and one in a pure monopoly market.

Example of a firm operating in a pure competition market

Pure competitors such as retail operations however have no control of the market and thus no control over prices (O'Sullivan, Sheffrin, and Perez 2009). A firm in such a market could sell any quantities of its products without influencing the market prices.

It is quite difficult to get markets that are purely competitive where buyers have full knowledge, there are no barriers of entry and exit, buyers can easily switch from one seller to the other, and where there are a large number of buyers and sellers. However, retailers of agricultural commodities could provide a good example of a pure competition market.

Some traders have sought to differentiate their farm produce thus reducing price competition in this market. For instance, since consumers are becoming more health conscious, traders of farm produce are venturing into natural foods in place of GMOs whereas packaging is also gaining prominence as a differentiation tool.

Market for agricultural products is set to change resulting to a decline in price competition. Traders are seeking other forms of competitive fronts such as packaging and focus of healthy products. Therefore, the market is set to convert into monopolistic competition where differentiation is critical. Suppliers should therefore brace themselves for non-price competition.

Example of a pure monopoly

A pure monopoly is a market structure where there is only one seller of a product or service. This type of market structure is characterized by high barriers to entry, which prevent other firms from entering the market. The monopolist has complete control over the market and can set prices and output levels without competition.

One example of a pure monopoly is a utility company, such as a water or electricity provider. These companies often have a legal monopoly, meaning they are the only firm allowed to provide the service in a given area. They can set prices and output levels without competition, which can lead to higher prices and lower quality of service.

Another example of a pure monopoly is a pharmaceutical company that has developed a unique drug. This company can set prices and output levels without competition, which can lead to higher prices and lower quality of service. The company may also use its market power to engage in anti-competitive practices, such as patent trolling.

Monopolies can be harmful to society because they can lead to higher prices, lower quality of service, and reduced innovation. However, they can also be beneficial in some cases, such as when they provide essential services or develop new technologies. The key is to ensure that monopolies are regulated and held accountable to the public interest.

In conclusion, a pure monopoly is a market structure where there is only one seller of a product or service. This type of market structure is characterized by high barriers to entry, which prevent other firms from entering the market. The monopolist has complete control over the market and can set prices and output levels without competition.

Conclusion

The research paper has discussed the differences between pure competition and pure monopoly markets. It has provided examples of firms operating in each type of market and discussed the challenges they face. The paper has also discussed the importance of regulation in these markets to ensure fair competition and protect the interests of consumers.

of Macroeconomics G.C. Harcourt, 2019-03-13 This discourse on the conference proceedings unveils Sir John Hicks's efforts to discuss capital income family of concepts with their principal characteristics of intertemporality. Topics covered include the intergenerational transfer of economic inequality, a review of the recent development in the theory of equity in the economy's distribution and production process, labour and unemployment, market structure and international trade, taxation and the public sector, Third World industrialisation and Indian agriculture. This book will be of interest to students of Economics and Development Studies. Spatial Microeconomics Melvin L. Greenhut, 1995 In Spatial Microeconomics Melvin L. Greenhut argues that sellers in a space economy have the power to set prices and that this power stems naturally from the geographic separation of markets. Focusing on differentiated markets, this collection of his acclaimed essays reveals that even the pricing of services, electrical power and many other goods, although not distance related per se, can be analysed from a spatial perspective. Professor Greenhut demonstrates and empirically indicates how and why modern firms price heterogeneously over differentiated markets. The spatial framework sheds light on the impact of mergers and antitrust legislation as well as on international trade and other issues. These essays are intended to revitalize neoclassical microeconomics by adding a spatial dimension and so making purely and monopolistically competitive frameworks irrelevant. No other collection of essays points uniquely to the need to reformulate microeconomics on the basis of time and space. Spatial Microeconomics and its companion volume Location Economics will be welcomed by students, teachers and practitioners of economics for improving access to Professor Greenhut's many important essays and papers. The Microeconomics of Transformation and Growth European Association for Comparative Economic Studies, 1998 A theoretical and empirical discussion of the significance of a microeconomic approach to the transformation process in Eastern Europe. It reveals that microeconomic conditions constitute the framework for the successful restructuring and recovery of the post-socialist countries in Europe. Microeconomics Dominick Salvatore, 1986 The Third Edition of this text offers a blend of new and old topics and a review of the implications of international issues on microeconomics topics. It has separate chapters on game theory and financial microeconomics whilst adding new coverage of production, revolution, international economics of scale and the economics of discrimination. Making Meritocracy Tarun Khanna, Michael Szonyi, 2022 How do societies identify and promote merit? Enabling all people to fulfill their potential and ensuring the selection of competent and capable leaders are central challenges for any society. These are not new concerns. Scholars, educators and political and economic elites in China and India have been pondering them for centuries and continue to do so today with enormously high stakes. In Making Meritocracy Tarun Khanna and Michael Szonyi have gathered over a dozen

experts from a range of intellectual perspectives political science history philosophy anthropology economics and applied mathematics to discuss how the two most populous societies in the world have addressed the issue of building meritocracy historically philosophically and in practice They focus on how contemporary policy makers educators and private sector practitioners seek to promote it today Importantly they also discuss Singapore which is home to large Chinese and Indian populations and the most successful meritocracy in recent times Both China and India look to it for lessons Though the past present and future of meritocracy building in China and India have distinctive local inflections their attempts to enhance their power influence and social well being by prioritizing merit based advancement offers rich lessons both for one another and for the rest of the world including rich countries like the United States which are currently witnessing broad based attacks on the very idea of meritocracy
