Stimulation Control Switch

For many patients, the Stimulation Control switch has been turned off by their doctor. Patients should not be alarmed if the switch is accidentally moved; nothing will happen.

Some patients, however, will have one control—the amplitude (stimulation intensity)—turned on.

For patients who have the amplitude turned on:

This switch should be set in the left position, lined up with the gray box or Δ symbol. If the switch is accidentally moved, push it to the left as shown.

Note: When the amplitude is turned on, the Increase $\uparrow$ and Decrease $\downarrow$ keys on the keypad adjust the amplitude.
