Mark Ravenhill Plays Shopping And Fing:

Shopping and F*ing Mark Ravenhill, 1997-01-01 This ground breaking drama was Mark Ravenhill's first full length play and part of a movement in the 1990s of in your face British theatre which frankly dealt with issues of sex and violence and pointedly challenged societal values The play explores how consumerism has become our new value system which reduces everything else to a mere transaction as shopping malls become the new cathedrals of Western consumerism The plot follows a crowd of drifters and sex traders in a seedy area of London in the 1990s Five main characters are linked loosely and intermittently and at the center of the play is an ever changing love triangle of petty criminals It is a gritty grimy urban society a depressing microcosm of drugs shoplifting prostitution and sexual adventure The characters have shunned morality and conduct hedonistic and destructive lives in this shocking humorous nihilistic play that examines a completely corrupted society final addition to Cohn's scholarly legacy The Depiction of Gender and Toxic Masculinity in Mark Ravenhill's "The Cut" Kristina von Kölln, 2020-11-03 Seminar paper from the year 2020 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Other grade 2.0 Technical University of Braunschweig language English abstract This paper examines the depiction of gender in Mark Ravenhill's play The Cut. Special emphasis is hereby placed on the aspect of toxic masculinity, a topic which has not lost its relevance since its first definition in the 1980s. Toxic masculinity and patriarchal dystopian systems are closely intertwined and have for some time found their place in feminist dystopian narratives such as The Handmaid Tale by Margaret Atwood, Octavia Butler's Wild Seed or Vox by Christina Dalcher. At first glance, Marc Ravenhill's The Cut fits into this list only in terms of the dystopian moment. However, upon closer inspection, his play, which focuses almost exclusively on the male characters, also reveals the effects of patriarchal cultures and toxic masculinity on both the female and, in particular, the male members of society. Nevertheless, the aspect of gender and especially toxic masculinity has not yet been dealt with in the context of Ravenhill's work. Merle Tinnies, for example, concentrated primarily on the aspect of the immobility of power in her detailed analysis of The Cut, while Robert Kielawski placed his focus on the reinvention of utopia, revolution, and the big Other in decline. Kielawski, the aspect of gender inequality, however, did not seem to play a role for either of them.

Furthermore, neither the critics nor Ravenhill himself addressed the topic. In order to fill this gap, the present work will analyse The Cut based on the thesis that Marc Ravenhill's The Cut represents a patriarchal dystopia whose members suffer from the effects of toxic masculinity. In the course of this paper, Marc Ravenhill and The Cut will be briefly introduced, followed by a theoretical background on gender in dystopian fiction in general and toxic masculinity in particular, and finally the depiction of gender and toxic masculinity in The Cut. In order to be able to undertake an analysis that is as detailed as possible despite the limited scope of this work, Chapter 4 will focus primarily on the main character of the play, Paul, in order to highlight the aspects of toxic masculinity. However, this should not lead to the assumption that not all other characters would also show similar symptoms.
