Teacher Evaluation Ann Elizabeth McClure,2008 This qualitative research study concerns teacher evaluation in the early years of teaching The small number of participants represents a wide range of roles in teacher evaluation in both the pre service context and the beginning in service context The data was gathered through face to face interviews focus groups and written documentation sources used in teacher evaluation in both contexts The study provides a written account from various perspectives about a very personal and emotional topic in education teacher evaluation The questions asked in the face to face interviews and focus groups followed a self designed parallel framework of questioning to purposefully explore evaluation of the practicum experience during teacher education and evaluation of teacher performance during the initial year of teaching I tape recorded and transcribed all the data which I transferred into data base software to conduct some of the analysis As well constant comparative analysis techniques such as close reading and rereading coding displays data queries relistening of tapes with the printed transcripts to make connections and diagrams supported the data analysis to find answers to the questions guiding the study Although the participants in the study acknowledge the intent of the teacher evaluation processes in both pre and beginning in service contexts has merit in actual practice it appears to be problematic Teacher evaluation according to the participants in this study appears to be more of a technical exercise than a valuable function to promote teacher growth and development Aside from the formative feedback received by the pre service teacher participants little about the process was deemed valuable for teacher growth and development Specific concerns included the artificiality of the process in both contexts the lack of candid reporting on the summative reports and the difference between pre service to in service of formative evaluation methods Teacher evaluation practices in Ontario notably in service have changed since this study was conducted It remains unclear whether these changes will translate into a different outcome through the teacher evaluation process More research is required to continue the discussion this study begins in the province of Ontario If the province is concerned about teacher growth and development to support improved student achievement in the classroom it is important that the teacher evaluation process is aligned through the transition to teaching As well it is important that the time and energy spent on teacher evaluation does in fact lead to improved teacher quality to support student achievement in the classroom Otherwise as was detailed by the participants in this study teacher evaluation will continue to be characterized as a classroom observation followed by a written report that simply serves a purpose of accountability

Teacher Evaluation as a Growth Process Dianna Whitlock Ed.D.,2020-05-17 While this book focuses on evaluation of teachers it is actually a book about fostering professional growth and improvement In our writings we provide support for teacher evaluation as a growth exercise and show how creating a feedback rich culture in a school nurtures this process The underlying theme is that evaluation data be utilized to drive professional development and growth leading to reduction of teacher attrition and improved learning for students At the heart of this feedback rich culture is the observation and evaluation process For evaluation to be an exercise in professional growth data must be collected and reviewed with the teacher so the administrator can provide support with transparency This culture also places an urgency on the teacher evaluation process that has been historically absent We include practical tips for creating this culture and maximizing opportunities for feedback and examine traditional methods of evaluation and why these fell short in giving meaningful feedback to teachers We will share innovative trends in teacher evaluation and how these can be utilized to drive teacher growth ultimately leading to improved student achievement As our nation faces a teacher shortage and increasing teacher attrition rate it is more vital than ever to retain and develop those currently practicing in the classroom We highlight a research study by the author of teachers who have been evaluated consistently over a three year period This is more than a how to book with a list of how to best implement the teacher evaluation process in your school Instead it is a how book with best practices from experienced administrators and research from experts in the field such as Charlotte Danielson Harvey Silver and Robert Marzano to guide educators to make informed decisions about implementing and improving their evaluation processes to meet their district s needs
