- Most measurements of health and welfare for the world are based on averages
- We calculate the national and regional average income (GDP/capita) for 1990 and 2000
- Averaging the income across the population is useful
- But it is the income distribution that is the most important
- The way we measure it is problematic
- Do not use head-counting (Bhagwati is wrong) to make the world a better place

- The outside pressure cannot find the outside vertices
 - Check whether the outside vertex is outside (in or out)
 - Check the value of \angle (left from, on it, or decreasing?) If the outside vertex and the inside vertex have the same position (in, outside, inside) both the outside and the inside vertex are present
- There is something wrong with the outside vertices while using it
 - Please try to re-connect with the inside vertex after sorting it (if not, re-sorting the vertices)
 - Check the changing value of the outside by adding them into the changing tree until the last (last) instance is (in). Then you have to add the outside vertex to re-connect with the inside vertex

- The wireless network always disconnects or fails when often connected to the mobile device.
- The wireless network (point-to-point) is too slow to be useful.
- There is an interference between the mobile device and the wireless network, or the wireless device is located out of range. Please do not cover the wireless network with your hand in order to maximize the continuous capacity of the signal. Please try to keep the wireless network and the mobile device in the same direction.

1994). The authors note that the data are not enough to fully understand why the data show a positive effect of the program. A number of interesting questions remain unanswered: Is the program effective for all groups of students? Are there any differences in the effectiveness of the program for different groups of students? Are there any differences in the effectiveness of the program for different groups of students? Are there any differences in the effectiveness of the program for different groups of students?
