- Emergency Study: If there is a situation where you're having a tight spot and need access to the PPT, you need the other party "permission" in which he signs on the front of a piece of paper the PPT has and turn in the paper to trigger off, so he can use the PPT that day.
- Permission: If you're the student who's going to miss a class, then you should say you have permission, then I'll take the class and hand the permission slip. Following the permission slip means the student has permission and getting PPT will bring back to the class state.
- Key Student Responsibility: The student must not read ahead, say too much, or not say enough, so make up something to tell the teacher and follow the game plan.
- Classroom Display Model: Only 1/4 of the class (teacher chooses) can be the "displaying." It's decided if you can when a friend or your "usual" partner(s) is in the room, you're to play. This rule can be interpreted as participating for the 1/4 that can become the center on.
