

A man with a beard and sunglasses, wearing a black jacket and blue jeans, sits on a chrome motorcycle. He is holding a handgun in each hand, pointing them outwards. The motorcycle is on a paved path that leads into a green field. In the background, there are rolling green hills, a few trees, and a small white building. A large, bright lightning bolt strikes the ground to the left of the path, and another smaller lightning bolt is visible to the right. The sky is dark and stormy.

Bloomers on the Liffey Paul Van Caspel, 1986 The winding streets of Leopold Bloom's Dublin have always challenged the reader's orientation. Heavy critical traffic has often made matters worse: a surprising number of scholarly guidebooks can lead one astray with demonstrably incorrect readings. In Bloomers on the Liffey Paul van Caspel sets off to follow some of the routes mapped out by those guides and to put up warnings of his own at dangerous crossroads: perhaps even to uproot a misleading signpost or two. Van Caspel examines the ways in which various annotations summaries translations and critical studies misapprehend key passages of Ulysses. Many elaborate explications he finds are founded on factual errors irrelevant associations and inaccurate or selective quotations all of which deviate from what actually happens and result in misdirected exegesis. Bloomers on the Liffey provides an episode by episode eisegesis taking the reader back into Joyce's work. Van Caspel compares distorted readings to the text itself not to add to the mass of interpretation but to clear the way for more accurate appreciation. Throughout he quotes the definitive new Gabler edition with references to both Gabler and the 1961 Random House edition. Readers encountering Ulysses for the first time will find skillful assistance through the inevitable textual pitfalls and interpretive difficulties. More experienced Joyceans will relish the even handed but pointed reappraisals of
