Autonomous Dynamic Reconfiguration in Multi-Agent Systems Markus Hannebauer, 2003-08-02 High communication efforts and poor problem solving results due to restricted overview are two central issues in collaborative problem solving. This work addresses these issues by introducing the processes of agent melting and agent splitting that enable individual problem solving agents to continually and autonomously reconfigure and adapt themselves to the particular problem to be solved. The author provides a sound theoretical foundation of collaborative problem solving itself and introduces various new design concepts and techniques to improve its quality and efficiency such as the multi phase agreement finding protocol for external problem solving, the composable belief desire intention agent architecture and the distribution aware constraint specification architecture for internal problem solving. The practical relevance and applicability of the concepts and techniques provided are demonstrated by using medical appointment scheduling as a case study.

Parallel Processing for Artificial Intelligence 1 L.N. Kanal, H. Kitano, V. Kumar, C.B. Suttner, 2014-06-28 Parallel processing for AI problems is of great current interest because of its potential for alleviating the computational demands of AI procedures. The articles in this book consider parallel processing for problems in several areas of artificial intelligence: image processing, knowledge representation in semantic networks, production rules, mechanization of logic, constraint satisfaction, parsing of natural language, data filtering and data mining. The publication is divided into six sections. The first addresses parallel computing for processing and understanding images. The second discusses parallel processing for semantic networks which are widely used means for representing knowledge. Methods which enable efficient and flexible processing of semantic networks are expected to have high utility for building large scale knowledge based systems. The third section explores the automatic parallel execution of production systems which are used extensively in building rule based expert systems. Systems containing large numbers of rules are slow to execute and can significantly benefit from automatic parallel execution. The exploitation of parallelism for the mechanization of logic is dealt with in the fourth section. While sequential control aspects pose problems for the parallelization of production systems, logic has a purely declarative interpretation which does not demand a particular evaluation strategy. In this area, therefore, very large search spaces provide significant potential for parallelism. In particular, this is true for automated theorem proving. The fifth section considers the problem of constraint satisfaction which is a useful abstraction of a number of important problems in AI and other fields of computer science. It also discusses the technique of consistent labeling as a preprocessing step in the constraint satisfaction problem. Section VI consists of two articles each on a different important topic. The first discusses parallel formulation for the Tree Adjoining Grammar (TAG) which is a powerful formalism for describing natural languages. The second examines the suitability of a parallel programming paradigm called Linda for solving problems in artificial intelligence. Each of the areas discussed in the book holds many open problems, but it is believed that parallel processing will form a key ingredient in achieving at least partial solutions. It is hoped that the contributions sourced from experts around the world will inspire readers to take on these challenging areas of inquiry
