2 pages | 317 words

Lifespan development draws on ideas from the theory of evolution, which suggests that we adapt to ensure our survival. As society, culture, and history change, we must also adapt to these changes to ensure our survival. Social, cultural, and historical influences play a vital role in human development. One way to examine lifespan development is by interviewing people about their life experiences and giving them the opportunity to highlight any influence on their development. The following project seeks to do just that, which leads me to the title: "What are the similarities and differences between Tony and Jo's childhood and life experiences compared to those of their own children, and what have been the main sources of influence on their development?" The project uses a pre-recorded videotape by the Open University containing three semi-structured interviews conducted by three different interviewers on the same two participants, Tony and Jo, a married middle-aged couple. The interviews are conducted in succession, with the first interviewer, Jane Tobbell, having known the couple for some time, while the second (Dan Goodley) and third (Carol Tindall) have not met them before. The interviews are filmed by a camera crew, and along with the video tape, the researcher had access to the transcripts of the interviews. Ethical issues were considered in this psychological research project. For instance, the participants' surnames, Jo and Tony, are not disclosed to protect their anonymity. Moreover, the participants are not pressured into responding in a particular way, and the questions they are asked are open-ended. The interviews appear to be relaxed, and the participants are treated with respect, while the interviewers' responses are non-judgmental. In the third interview, the participants are encouraged to give feedback on the interviewers' styles, acknowledging that they are involved in the research process, and their input is vital. This is the researcher's first qualitative project while studying the Open University course DSE 212 Exploring Psychology.

The Human Developmental Needs of Adults Across the Lifespan with Implications for Higher Education Norma M. K. Roberts,1978 Life-span Development John W. Santrock,1989 The International Journal of Aging & Human Development ,1995 Life-span Development Janina M. Jolley,Mark L. Mitchell,1996 The authors wrote this book to help students think like developmental psychologists Specifically they want students who read this book to Critically examine claims about the nature and causes of development Have a clear understanding of the major issues in developmental psychology To understand what developmental psychologists have learned about the development of memory intelligence attachment and other developmental issues Pref Critical Theories of Psychological Development John M. Broughton,1987-03-31 Something instructive occurred in the process of entitling the present collection Both editor and publisher sought a simple and succinct rubric for the various pieces of work But they rapidly and reluctantly reached the consensus that by either intellectual or marketing criteria the insertion of the adjective psychological to qualify the noun development was a communicative necessity. Much to the chagrin of the developmental psychologist, the term development still connotes to the world at large as well as the general community of publishers, librarians, and computer archivists the modernization of nation states. Inside and outside the university, I find that when asked, "What are you interested in?" I am not at liberty to reply, "The concept of development without being absorbed immediately into a discussion of Third World studies." The approach of the present volume should be taken as an exhortation to psychologists to take the genealogy of development seriously. The history of the discipline is not so different from the history of the word, and as we shall discover, the concern with developmental progress cannot easily be separated from the urge for dominion. This volume presents a selection from the recent critical scholarship on psychological development. The emphasis is on rethinking the field of developmental psychology at the level of theory.
