Functional Imaging in living Plants - Cell Biology meets Physiology Alex Costa, Markus Schwarzländer, George R Littlejohn, Tobias Meckel, 2015-05-08 The study of plant cell physiology is currently experiencing a profound transformation Novel techniques allow dynamic in vivo imaging with subcellular resolution covering a rapidly growing range of plant cell physiology. Several basic biological questions that have been inaccessible by the traditional combination of biochemical, physiological and cell biological approaches now see major progress. Instead of grinding up tissues, destroying their organisation or describing cell and tissue structure without a measure for its function, novel imaging approaches can provide the critical link between localisation, function and dynamics. Thanks to a fast growing collection of available fluorescent protein variants and sensors along with innovative new microscopy technologies and quantitative analysis tools, a wide range of plant biology can now be studied in vivo, including cell morphology, migration, protein localization, topology, movement, protein-protein interaction, organelle dynamics as well as ion, ROS, redox dynamics. Within the cell, genetic targeting of fluorescent protein probes to different organelles and subcellular locations has started to reveal the stringently compartmentalized nature of cell physiology and its sophisticated spatiotemporal regulation in response to environmental stimuli. Most importantly, such cellular processes can be monitored in their natural 3D context even in complex tissues and organs, a condition not easily met in studies on mammalian cells. Recent new insights into plant cell physiology by functional imaging have been largely driven by technological developments such as the design of novel sensors, innovative microscopy imaging techniques and the quantitative analysis of complex image data. Rapid further advances are expected which will require close interdisciplinary interaction of plant biologists with chemists, physicists, mathematicians and computer scientists. High throughput approaches will become increasingly important to fill genomic data with life on the scale of cell physiology. If the vast body of information generated in the omics era is to generate actual mechanistic understanding of how the live plant cell works, functional imaging has enormous potential to adopt the role of a versatile standard tool across plant biology and crop breeding. We welcome original research papers, methodological papers, reviews and mini reviews with particular attention to contributions in which novel imaging techniques enhance our understanding of plant cell physiology and permit to answer questions that cannot be easily addressed with other techniques.

The Action Plan for Australian Birds 2020 Stephen T. Garnett, G Barry Baker, 2021-12. The Action Plan for Australian Birds 2020 is the most comprehensive review of the status of Australia's avifauna ever attempted. The latest in a series of action plans for Australian birds that have been produced every decade since 1992, it is also the largest. The accounts in this plan have been authored by more than 300 of the most knowledgeable bird experts in the country and feature far more detail than any of the earlier plans. This volume also includes accounts of over 60 taxa that are no longer considered threatened, mainly thanks to sustained conservation action over many decades. This extensive book covers key themes that have emerged in the last decade, including the increasing impact of climate change as a threatening process, most obviously in Queensland's tropical rainforests where many birds are being pushed up the mountains. However, the effects are also indirect, as happened in the catastrophic fires of 2019-20. Many of the newly listed birds are subspecies confined to Kangaroo Island where fire destroyed over half the population. But there are good news.

stories too especially on islands where there have been spectacular successes with predator control Such uplifting results demonstrate that when action plans are followed by action on the ground threatened species can indeed be recovered and threats alleviated The Role of Environmental Stressors in Neurocritical Patient Outcomes Luis Rafael
