Histoire de cette passion peu commune qui existe entre les Québécois et leurs tétrapodes. Phénomène de société distincte puisque la rhipidogone n'existe pas au Canada anglais. De la famille Plouffe, l'auteur analyse ces milliers d'histoires qui ont façonné l'image sociale et culturelle du Québec. SDM Les productions céramiques du Québec méridional, c. 1680-1890 Yves Monette, 2006. Historical records mention that over 200 potters were active in Southern Québec between 1655 and 1920. These locally made productions are now found on every archaeological excavation undertaken in Southern Québec but their contribution to the understanding of the archaeological sites is limited because these locally made ceramics are rarely identified. This study presents compositional analysis as a solution to the problem of identification and provenance of local wares. Through the analysis of major, minor and trace elements using ICP-AES and ICP-MS of about 300 ceramics uncovered on 16 production sites, the author was able to distinguish and characterize the different productions as well as relate them to the Southern Québec geological environments and reduce the risks of confusion with exogenous productions. La vie suspendue Claude Jasmin, 1994.
