Merchants and Mariners in Medieval Ireland Timothy O'Neill, 1987      Irish and Scottish Mercantile Networks in Europe and Overseas in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries David Dickson, Jan Parmentier, Jane H. Ohlmeyer, 2007 The contributions in this collection of essays make an important step in reconstructing the history of the Irish and Scottish mercantile diasporas in the 17th and 18th centuries      Progress and Problems in Medieval England Richard Britnell, John Hatcher, 2002-05-16 A series of essays on the society and economy of England between the eleventh and the sixteenth centuries      Medieval British Towns Heather Swanson, 1999-06-30 Medieval British Towns sets out to explain the reasons for the explosion of town foundation throughout the British Isles from the twelfth century onwards and charts the subsequent development of towns through to the early sixteenth century The raison d'être of towns throughout the British Isles was as market places and centres of trade in an increasingly commercialised society The comparative approach adopted here illuminates the diverging experiences of towns in the four different countries of the British Isles but sets them within the overall context of a shared value system where social cohesion was provided by the church It offers a guide to students and general readers first venturing into the study of medieval urban history and provides comparative material for more experienced students of both history and the related disciplines of archaeology and historical geography      An Eoraip: Gaelic Ireland in Medieval and Early Modern Europe, 2025-08-14 Medieval and early modern Irish scholars thought of themselves as Europeans As an expression of territorial association this belief reflects both their familiarity with the geographical traditions of Antiquity and the integration of their society into economic cultural and political networks that spanned the continent But it was also an articulation of a perceived cultural affinity often denied in modern scholarship The chapters in this volume examine the many and various ways that Gaelic Ireland was integrated into the broader European world focusing on literature and learning real world politics economics and travel and questions of identity Contributors are Rachel Brody Michael Clarke Simon Egan Deborah Hayden Brendan Kane Victoria L McAlister Ken Donnchu Patricia Palmer Brian Stone and Patrick Wadden      Hospitality in Medieval Ireland, 900-1500 Catherine Marie O'Sullivan, 2004 Hospitality was one of the most important social institutions and cultural customs in medieval Ireland The fundamental principles governing the provision of hospitality were rooted in both the secular and religious traditions of Irish culture and were represented in both the public and private spheres of Irish life Legal texts court records ecclesiastical decrees concerning the privileges of high ranking clerics and secular statements regarding the rights of kings reveal that the practice of hospitality was largely contractual and generally involved the mutually self interested transactions of mundane affairs Yet an ethos of generosity strongly linked to a cultural code of honor suffused the Irish practice of hospitality with an air of moral uprightness and decorousness Gnomonic literature provided a series of adages maxims and proverbs reminding individuals that the path to virtuous living began with charity liberality and good housekeeping while sagas and bardic praise poetry

underscored the influence hospitality had in determining one's standing in society. Still, hospitality was not wholly secular nor exclusively Irish for that matter. It was a basic Christian duty sanctioned by the Church and observed throughout the medieval world. Christian precept and example had a major impact on native Irish concepts of hospitality and how the practice was played out in everyday life.

Towns in Decline, AD100-1600 Terry Slater, 2017-07-05 Many European towns have experienced loss of population, degradation of physical structure and profound economic change at least once since the height of the Roman Empire. This volume is an examination of the various causes of these changes, the results which flowed from them and the reasons why some urban centres survived, revived and eventually flourished again while others failed and died. The contributors bring to bear the techniques of history and archaeology, the perspectives of economics, agronomy, medicine, architecture and planning, geography and law to the study. The result is a synthesis which connects the Decline of the Roman Empire to the effects of the Black Death and the economic transformation of Renaissance Florence.

Sixteenth-Century Ireland Colm Lennon, 1994. In 1500, most of Ireland lay outside the ambit of English royal power. Only a small area around Dublin was directly administered by the crown. The rest of the island was run in more or less autonomous fashion by Anglo-Norman magnates or Gaelic chieftains.

Archbishop Richard Creagh of Armagh, 1523-1586 Colm Lennon, 2000. As the first book on Richard Creagh, this biography is an important addition to scholarship on the Tudor-Elizabethan period. Although he spent all but three of his twenty-two years as archbishop of Armagh in prison, Creagh was a highly influential figure in early Elizabethan Ireland. By the end of his life in 1586, he had come to symbolize the dilemma of a politically loyal prelate of the Roman Catholic church in a Protestant state. He failed ultimately to satisfy the Tudor authorities about the compatibility of his allegiances and paid with his life.

The Mason and His Mark Colum Hourihane, 2000. Gothic architecture was first introduced into Ireland by the 12th-century church reform movement and during the Anglo Norman conquest in the 13th century Little evidence survives to identify the imported workforce except for their individual signature marks which are not found before the conquest Houritane presents a thorough study of the marks to untangle the complicated regional architecture of medieval Ireland The marks have enabled him to place a number of important buildings within groups and thereby propose a new dating framework for the buildings Includes a comprehensive catalogue with illustrations of the marks      Writings on Irish History ,1984      Thomas Johnson Westropp (1860-1922)
