

HUMAN ORGANS

This diagram illustrates the human internal organ system. A central human figure is shown in a split view: the left half displays the muscular system in pink, while the right half shows the skeletal system in white. Surrounding the figure are various internal organs, each depicted in a stylized, colorful manner. At the top left is a large, convoluted brain. To its right is a liver with its characteristic lobed shape. Further right is a heart with visible blood vessels. Below the brain is a stomach with its characteristic J-shape. To the right of the stomach is another heart. Below the stomach are two kidneys, each with a distinct bean shape. At the bottom left are a pair of lungs with visible bronchial trees. To the right of the lungs are two more kidneys. At the bottom right is a large, coiled section of the large intestine. The entire diagram is set against a light gray grid background.
